

THIRTEENTH NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON PLANNING HISTORY

October 15-18, 2009
Oakland, California

The Society for American City and Regional Planning History presents

The Thirteenth National Conference on Planning History
October 15-18, 2009
Oakland, California

On behalf of the Program Committee, the Local Arrangements Committee, and the many people whose generous contributions of time, ideas, and resources have made this conference possible, we welcome you to Oakland for the Thirteenth National Conference on Planning History. The significant increase in proposals for the conference is an exciting indication of the field's vitality. In this conference program we see the dynamic outcome and trends of recent scholarly research, and also the productive dialogue with contemporary planning and policy. Especially encouraging is the increase in graduate student participation, as well as the continuing broadening of topics and historical forces that are recognized as shaping cities and regions. Building on the collaborations of recent meetings, SACRPH has also benefitted from working closely with the American Planning Association California Northern Section. We extend a special welcome to Bay Area planners, preservationists, and urbanists who are attending the conference for the first time, and to our international visitors.

It is a pleasure to review the depth and range of paper sessions and roundtables. The planning history conference schedule is always packed with papers, shared meals, receptions, and tours, but this year's meeting is even denser than in the past. We draw your attention to several new and distinctive features in the program. There are two New Media sessions (#28 and #36), organized by Kristin Szylvian and Andrew Hurley. We are hosting our first Undergraduate and Masters student poster exhibit, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, to be followed by presentations and discussion in session #52 (made possible by Michael Kahan and Asha Weinstein Agrawal). Session #49 offers the opportunity to provide feedback on a documentary film to the director, while the film is still in production. This year we welcome Ronit Bezael and her documentary Mixing It Up, a follow-up to her earlier film Voices of Cabrini: Remaking Chicago's Public Housing (1999). Graduate students and recent graduates may take note of the Friday night student reception, Saturday's proposal-writing workshop (session #47, by pre-registration), and the publishing roundtable (#46). The book exhibit has nearly doubled in size, thanks to organizer Adam Zalma.

Two plenary sessions and the presidential address offer stimulating views on the history and present practice of planning, with an emphasis on the Bay Area as well as on the contributions of planning towards achieving more just and equitable cities. Friday morning opens with a roundtable on regional equity. Based upon their experience pioneering regional equity planning efforts in the Bay Area, distinguished panelists Carl Anthony, Amy Dean, Manuel Pastor, and Howard Gillette will discuss the opportunities now at hand for realizing greater environmental as well as social justice through progressive planning and policy formation. The Friday luncheon plenary "Planning Firsts, 1960s-1990s," continues SACRPH's tradition of inviting planners from recent decades to speak to the attendees, and to one another. This session, organized by John Landis, focuses on Bay Area innovations that later led national and international trends: open space, environmental impact, public transit, urban design, and affordable housing. Saturday's luncheon features Robin Bachin's presidential address, "Planning at the Grassroots: Promoting Equity and Sustainability through Local Activism." At the Thursday night opening reception, Richard Walker will speak to the group about "West Oakland and the Bay Area Region."

We hope that many attendees will be able to join the remarkable West Oakland tour on Thursday afternoon, "Democracy on the Ground in West Oakland: Immigrants, Migrants, and the Development of an African-American Community." Led by historians expert in complementary aspects of 19th and 20th century Oakland (Marta Gutman and Donna Murch), and the founding president of the Citizens' Housing Corporation (James Buckley), the tour will also be joined along the way by community leaders. This event promises to galvanize a unique conversation about the history and future of West Oakland. Those interested in the Bay Area will have a wide range of conference paper sessions to choose from, signaling a forthcoming wave of new scholarship on the region. Finally, the four Sunday tours will take advantage of the rich variety of the Bay Area: Historical Development and Ethnic Change in Oakland; a Berkeley Architectural Tour; Urban Renewal in San Francisco; and North of the Golden Gate: Growth Control, Open Space, and Alternative Agriculture on the Urban Fringe.

Additional information about conference and hotel registration, events, and the host city and region are available at the conference website, www.barnard.edu/urban/sacrph09. We welcome you to the conference and to Oakland, and we look forward to joining in this investigation of cities and regions--past, present, and future.

Thursday, October 15th - Pre-Conference Events

8:30am-3pm      Oakland Waterfront Food Trail Tour

Planners are increasingly concerned with distribution, local production, and access to foods as part of sustainable environmental and economic planning. Oakland has a 100-year history as a producer and exporter of agricultural products, and today continues with a growing specialty and artisan food products sector. Join Richard Walker (University of California, Berkeley) and local Oakland historians on a tour of Oakland's food manufacturing history, past and present.

This FREE tour is sponsored by the City of Oakland and the Bay Area Industrial Roundtable. Please contact Zelda Bronstein at (510-528-8345) or zjb1731@comcast.net by Monday, October 5.

12:00-1:00pm      Registration

2nd Floor Lobby

1:00-6:00pm      Pre-Conference Tour:

Departs from Hotel Lobby

Democracy on the Ground in West Oakland: Immigrants, Migrants, and the Development of an African-American Community

Marta Gutman, The City College of the City University of New York

James Buckley, MIT

Donna Murch, Rutgers University

This pre-conference event will explore the development of a multi-ethnic, racially integrated, working class community: West Oakland. By bus and on foot, the tour group will explore the history of this neighborhood in its many phases. West Oakland received its initial boost as the western terminus of the first transcontinental railroad (1869) and experienced increasing settlement of immigrants from Central and Southern Europe, as well as a small community of African Americans, and some Chinese and Japanese Americans. When the African American population soared beginning with the Great Migration, West Oakland became the center of union activity for the mostly black Pullman Porters (a union eventually headed by C.L. Dellums, uncle of Oakland's current mayor). Starting in the 1880s, white, middle-class, Protestant women established institutions aimed at "reforming" the cultural ways of immigrant and migrant families; they were joined after the turn of the century by Irish Catholic and African American women. The tour will visit the physical evidence of this incrementally built charitable landscape. Finally, the tour will explore the concrete landscape of Oakland's prolific urban renewal program in West Oakland, in which the city demolished many Victorian homes to build schools, parks, and government-sponsored low- and moderate-income housing.

Marta Gutman is revising her book What Kind of City: The Charitable Landscape Women Built for Children in Oakland, for publication with the University of Chicago Press. Donna Murch is the author of Living for the City: Migration, Education, and the Rise of the Black Panther Party in Oakland, California (University of North Carolina Press, spring 2010). Jim Buckley, currently a lecturer in the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at MIT, has more than 20 years of experience in affordable housing development in the Bay Area, starting with BRIDGE Housing Corporation and then as the founding president of Citizens' Housing Corporation.

5:00-8:00pm      Third Thursday

On the third Thursday of each month, Oakland holds a progressive art exhibit showing the diversity and quality of art available in Oakland. You can view exhibitions, attend artists' lectures and demonstrations, and participate in receptions and other special cultural events. Galleries in the downtown area from Jack London Square to City Hall will keep their doors open late, from 5-8pm. There will also be live music, and you can dine at nearby restaurants. A map showing participating galleries is at <http://oaklandculturalarts.org/main/thirdthursdays.htm>.

3:30-6:00pm      Registration

2nd Floor Lobby

6:00-9:00pm      Address and Reception

*Nile Hall, Preservation Park
13th Street and Martin Luther King, Jr. Way
(walking distance from Marriott)*

6:00-6:45pm      Address

Richard Walker, Department of Geography, Chair of the California Studies Center, University of California, Berkeley, will speak about "West Oakland and the Bay Area Region." Author of numerous books and articles, including The Conquest of Bread: 150 Years of Agribusiness in California (New Press, 2004), Professor Walker most recently published The Country in the City: The Greening of the San Francisco Bay Area (University of Washington Press, 2007).

Session 49 Documentary Film-in-Progress: Mixing It Up

Calvin Simmons 4

Chair: Brad Hunt, Roosevelt University

This session offers the opportunity to provide the filmmaker with feedback on this documentary while it is still in production. A follow-up to Voices of Cabrini: Remaking Chicago's Public Housing (1999), the documentary Mixing It Up looks at the redevelopment of Chicago's public housing ten years after the demolitions began. Mixing It Up intends to focus attention on the public policy of demolishing high-rise public housing and creating low-rise mixed-income communities in their place. The film builds on the words and voices of current and former public housing residents in order to assess the long-term impact of these changes on the very people that the policy is supposed to help, and on society as a whole. The film provides residents' perspectives on and scholars' responses to the redevelopment of Chicago, while creating a historical record of communities that will cease to exist. Further information is available at www.barnard.edu/urban/sacrph09/film/.

Tour 1 Historical Development and Ethnic Change in Oakland, 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Tour organizer: James Buckley, MIT

This guided walking/BART tour introduces residential and commercial districts in downtown Oakland and Asian and Latino neighborhoods. You will see how city planners and community activists have wrestled to preserve and create vital urban neighborhoods in the contemporary city. Highlights include: “10K” residential developments that formed part of the plan to increase the density of downtown by 10,000 units under former mayor Jerry Brown; Oakland’s Chinatown; and the Fruitvale District, a Latino neighborhood with several community-based development efforts including a mixed-use transit-oriented development at a BART station.

Tour 2 Berkeley Architectural Tour, 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Tour organizer: Steve Finacom, Community Historian

This walking tour sponsored by Berkeley Architectural Heritage Association (BAHA) begins and ends at the Downtown Berkeley BART station, and includes Downtown Berkeley, part of the UC Berkeley campus, and historic neighborhoods immediately adjacent to both. Highlights and themes include: an early 20th century commercial district and the ongoing debate over its 21st century future; a City Beautiful-era civic center; an evolving urban "Arts District" with a specialized streetscape; campus site originally laid out by Frederick Law Olmsted overlaid with a 1900s grand and formal Beaux Arts ensemble and later, Modernist interventions; a leafy, "Berkeley brownshingle" neighborhood that embodies Berkeley's Arts & Crafts period "Building with Nature" aesthetic movement; a lively student residential and commercial district where you'll see, side by side, a National Landmark Maybeck-designed church, 19th century Victorian homes, famed "People's Park", and redevelopment era highrise institutional housing. The tour will be led by Steve Finacom, a community historian and writer in Berkeley, who also works for the physical planning office at the University of California, Berkeley. BART tickets for travel between Oakland and Berkeley will be provided. There will be options for a no-host lunch at the end of the tour, and a brief refreshment / bathroom break mid-way. Brisk walking on paved pathways and sidewalks, some of it steeply uphill.

Tour 3 Urban Renewal in San Francisco, 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Tour organizer: Richard Brandi, Architectural Historian

This bus/walking tour will visit sites where San Francisco's once powerful Redevelopment Agency undertook massive renewal efforts between 1959 and 1971. Stops will include: the Golden Gateway, a mixed-use complex with high-rise housing, townhouses, and the Alcoa office building by Charles Basset of SOM; John Portman's Embarcadero Center; and Yerba Buena Center, with the subterranean Moscone Center, the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art by Mario Botta, James Stewart Polshek's theater, and Daniel Libeskind's Contemporary Jewish Museum. The last stop will be the little known Diamond Heights project, a strikingly suburban form in the center of the city, overlooking Glen Park canyon.

Tour 4 North of the Golden Gate: Growth Control, Open Space, and Alternative Agriculture on the Urban Fringe, 6:30 a.m.-4:00 p.m.

Tour organizers: Louise Nelson Dyble, Michigan Technological University
Stephanie Dyer, Sonoma State University

This bus tour will provide a taste of the economic, environmental, and culinary fruits of thirty years of growth control in Marin and Sonoma Counties. It will begin with an early morning drive through San Francisco and across the Golden Gate Bridge, followed by a stop at the Marin County farmers market in the shadow of Frank Lloyd Wright's Civic Center building. Participants will then head west through Marin's agricultural preserve, visiting a dairy and passing along the way some of the other specialty farms that supply the farmers market and the region's top restaurants. The tour will end with a picnic lunch at a historic winery in Sonoma's Valley of the Moon. Activists and professionals who have been directly involved with alternative agriculture and open space preservation the North Bay will address the group. Other speakers include Sally K. Fairfax, author of Buying Nature: The Limits of Land Acquisition as a Conservation Strategy (2005); Richard A. Walker, author of Country in the City: The Greening of the San Francisco Bay Area (2007); Greig Tor Guthey, who will discuss terroir and the politics of northern California wine; and Louise Nelson Dyble, author of Paying the Toll: Local Power, Regional Politics, and the Golden Gate Bridge (2009). Cost includes lunch. Seating is limited, and a minimum of 20 registrants is required.
