PUBLIC HISTORY COMMUNITY SERVICE Greenhills, OH

- Timing: Thursday, October 15, 9:00am – 2:00pm
- Organizers: Anne Delano Steinert, University of Cincinnati
Greenhills Historical Society
- Start Point: Clifton Court Hall (CCH), lower entry
- Accessibility: The activity will involve limited walking, squatting, and sitting on the ground. If possible, please bring your laptop computer and a water bottle. Please wear casual clothes appropriate for the weather; we will provide smocks for painting.
- Cost: Free, but registration implies a commitment to attend, and our partners will be depending upon you.

Join us to put your expertise to use for a community in need at our Public History Community Service Day in Greenhills, Ohio, one of three Greenbelt towns built during the New Deal. This event will be a collaboration between SACRPH attendees, University of Cincinnati history students, and the Greenhills Historical Society (GHS).

In the morning, we will scrape, sand, and paint wooden memorial benches throughout Greenhills. After a complimentary lunch, we will use resources from the GHS Museum and Archives, Greenhills High School Alumni Room, and Cincinnati and Hamilton County Public Library to research the residents of Greenhills who are memorialized on the benches. Our research will inform short writeups to be paired with the refurbished benches.

Be sure to arrive in Cincinnati in time to participate in this meaningful opportunity to explore this National Historic Landmark planned community and make a real contribution to a historic community!

We will carpool in private cars for the ~25-minute drive to and from Greenhills. If possible, please bring your laptop computer and a water bottle.; Please wear casual clothes; we will provide smocks for painting.

ALISON ISENBERG DISSERTATION COLLOQUIUM
Thursday, October 15, 1:00PM – 4:00PM

Von Rosenstiel Room, Arts & Sciences (A&S) Hall, Room 315

The Alison Isenberg Dissertation Colloquium brings together PhD candidates for a half-day of discussion about their research with mentors and peers. Interested students applied through an open call in the spring. The selected students have circulated a writing sample, such as a prospectus or chapter, in advance. At the workshop, students and mentors will meet in small groups, then convene as a full group to share aspects of their projects with one another. Participating students will not only have the attention of an “outside” expert in their field, but will also come together in community as a professional cohort. The event will conclude with a dinner on Thursday evening, following the opening plenary.

This year marks the inaugural colloquium, which SACRPH launched to honor the legacy of the late Alison Isenberg, past SACRPH president and Professor of History at Princeton University, who was deeply committed to graduate mentorship.

Thank you to the mentors and the ad hoc colloquium committee for supporting this effort, as well as to those who contributed to the Alison Isenberg Fund. If you are a graduate student who was not ready to participate or was not selected for this year’s Colloquium, we encourage you to apply for the next Colloquium, in 2028.

BUS TOUR – Nuclear History and Nature at Fernald Preserve

Timing:	Friday, October 16, 8:30am – 12:30pm
Guides:	Casey Huegel, University of Cincinnati Jason Krupar, University of Cincinnati
Start Point:	Arts & Sciences (A&S) Hall
Accessibility:	This tour will contain moderate walking. Come prepared for the weather.
Cost:	$30
AICP Credits:	2.5 CM

Bring your binoculars for a tour of the Fernald Preserve! Seventy-five years ago, a small community northwest of Cincinnati called Fernald was selected by the Atomic Energy Commission for the Feed Materials Production Center, the nation's first fully integrated uranium processing facility and the "first link" in the Cold War nuclear weapons complex. After several decades of production for the nuclear arms race, a "uranium leak" at the plant helped launch a grassroots environmental movement led by women in the Fernald Residents for Environmental Safety and Health who fought to clean up the nuclear waste in their backyard. 2026 marks twenty years since the completion of Fernald's ten-year, $4.4 billion Superfund cleanup, which dismantled the site's factories, remediated and isolated its radioactive waste, and ecologically restored the landscape. The 1,050-acre Fernald Preserve, a birding hot spot, features seven miles of hiking trails through wetlands, grasslands, and forest, and many opportunities to engage the site's complex history, including interpretive waysides, a self-guided exhibit gallery, and films. University of Cincinnati historians and professional interpreters will be on-site to guide you through Fernald's remarkable transformation from production to cleanup and discuss its current mission to educate the public and monitor and remediate the Cold War's environmental legacy.

BUS TOUR – Mariemont: The National Exemplar

Timing:	Friday, October 16, 9:00am – 12:00pm
Guide:	Bruce Stephenson, Rollins College
Start Point:	Arts & Sciences (A&S) Hall
Accessibility:	This tour will contain moderate walking. Come prepared for the weather.
Cost:	$30

The Mariemont tour will follow the historic progression of John Nolen’s new town, which is listed on the National Historic Register. While a student at the University of Munich, Nolen was influenced by Camillo Sitte’s The Art of City Planning, and it was the text he consulted for his month-long 1902 study of Tuscany. The tour will examine the neo-Renaissance lines he employed at Mariemont with Dale Park, envisioned as a working-class neighborhood modeled on the English Garden City, the starting point. The pedestrian-scaled experience will take in The Mariemont Community Church, inspired by Anglo-Norman parish churches of the 12th and 13th centuries, the recent group of neo-classical townhomes, and the Concourse, a scenic overlook of the Little Miami River.

WALKING TOUR – Gentrification in Historic Over-the-Rhine

Timing:	Friday, October 16, 10:00am – 12:00pm
Guides:	Anne Delano Steinert, University of Cincinnati Mary Burke Rivers, Over-the-Rhine Community Housing
Start Point:	Over-the-Rhine Community Housing, 114 West 14th Street, 45202; End at Findlay Market
Accessibility:	This tour will contain extensive walking. Come prepared for the weather.
Cost:	$10
AICP Credits:	1.5 CM

Cincinnati’s Over-the-Rhine was one of the most densely populated neighborhoods in 19th-century America. Originally settled by German immigrants, the neighborhood has housed successive groups, including Appalachian migrants and African Americans displaced by urban renewal in the nearby West End. A strong people’s housing movement emerged in

Over-the-Rhine in the 1980s to protect the needs and voices of low-income residents. When the 2001 police shooting of an unarmed Black teen set off a wave of civil unrest, business and political leaders joined together to create a community development corporation to facilitate yet another wave of neighborhood change. This tour will explore the history of housing and activism in Over-the-Rhine with an emphasis on gentrification since 2001.

BUS TOUR – Greenhills: New Deal New Town

- Timing: Friday, October 16, 1:00 – 4:00pm
- Tour Guides: Beth Sullebarger, Independent Scholar
Julie Turner, Independent Scholar
Mayor Dave Moore, Village of Greenhills
- Start Point: Arts & Sciences (A&S) Hall
- Accessibility: This tour will contain moderate walking. Come prepared for the weather.
- Cost: $30
- AICP Credits: 2.0 CM

Greenhills is one of three greenbelt towns built by the U.S. Resettlement Administration between 1935 and 1938. It represents one of the federal government's earliest efforts to solve urban problems. This New Deal project was the largest experiment in garden city planning ever undertaken in the U.S. Funded by a $31 million appropriation through the Emergency Relief Act of 1935, the Greenbelt Town Program sought to provide a model for suburban planning and development, borrowing basic design principles from Ebenezer Howard's Garden City concept and Clarence Perry's Neighborhood Unit Plan. Other sources include Mariemont by John Nolen; Radburn, New Jersey, by Clarence Stein and Henry Wright; and Norris, Tennessee, by Earle Sumner Draper, Tracy Augur, and Roland Wank. The village plan incorporated the basic elements of garden city suburban development in its use of a curvilinear street plan with five superblocks composed of cul-de-sacs and lanes, a commercial/civic center, town common, and a surrounding greenbelt, all of which remain basically intact. The village was named a National Historic Landmark in 2017.

WALKING TOUR – University of Cincinnati Campus History and Planning

- Timing: Friday, October 16, 1:30 – 4:00pm
- Guides: Greg Hand, Cincinnati Magazine
Davarian Baldwin, Trinity College
Joss Kiely, University of Cincinnati
- Start Point: Conference Registration Desk
- Accessibility: This tour will contain moderate walking. Come prepared for the weather.
- Cost: $10
- AICP Credits: 2.0 CM

This tour will explore the history and future of the University of Cincinnati’s Burnet Woods campus. The university moved into Burnet Woods, which was originally a public park, in the 1890s. Through multiple expansions north into the park and east into neighboring Corryville, UC has carved out a distinctly urban collegiate experience in which athletic facilities are embedded in the heart of a dense, hilly, urban campus. This tour will explore the campus’s earliest buildings, subsequent expansions, and the stunning 1991 Campus Masterplan by Hargreaves Associates which used clever landscape strategies to unify a patchwork of existing campus buildings and transformed the campus “from one of a commuter campus—dominated by roads and parking lots—to a pedestrian-oriented campus with new buildings and open spaces that created a dynamic campus that now promotes the quality of student life.” Finally, historian Davarian Baldwin will discuss UC’s history of campus expansion and its most recent move into the adjacent historically African American neighborhood of Avondale.

WALKING TOUR – From Industry to Recreation: Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky Riverfront

Timing:	Friday, October 16, 1:30 – 4:30pm
Guides:	Elizabeth Keslacy, Virginia Tech Wade Johnston, Tri-State Trails
Start Point:	Reds Hall of Fame and Museum, 100 Joe Nuxhall Way; end at same location
Accessibility:	This tour will contain extensive walking. Come prepared for the weather.
Cost:	$10

The Cincinnati riverfront was once home to shipbuilders, meatpackers, and a busy port. As in other Rust Belt cities, it declined in the early twentieth century, eventually cut off from the rest of downtown by interstate highways. Starting in the late 1960s, the city revitalized the waterfront, responding to demands for flood control and public access. This tour will detail the 20th-century evolution of the Cincinnati and Newport riverfronts.

We will compare the approaches taken by these two cities. On the Cincinnati side, new parks, stadiums, museums, bars, and restaurants transformed the river into a recreational and cultural destination. Meanwhile, on the Newport side, the city reinvented itself as a center for family entertainment with an aquarium, multiplex theater, and indoor recreation options while also reinvigorating its reputation as a destination for gambling and nightlife. More recently, the cities have paid greater attention to their connection, creating links across the river using bike trails and the pedestrianization of a former railroad bridge. Highlights will include Smale Park, the Serpentine Wall and Concourse Fountain at Yeatman's Cove, Sawyer Point, the Purple People Bridge, and Newport on the Levee to discuss the interconnection of ecology, infrastructure, and development.

Workshop

Chair: Christopher Harter, University of Cincinnati Libraries

Ohio session

Anne Delano Steinert, University of Cincinnati

The legacy of urban planning is found not only in the built environment, but in the collections of archival papers of planners, engineers, and others involved in the planning process. Archival collections provide evidence of decision making, design formulation, political and economic considerations that shape urban planning on cities and regions. Using host city Cincinnati as a lens into planning process, participants in this hands-on workshop will explore these topics through the examination of the papers of urban planners Alfred Bettman, Charles Stamm, and Ladislav Segoe housed as part of the Urban Studies Collection at the Archives and Rare Books Library (ARB) at the University of Cincinnati. The workshop will give participants time to explore these individuals' influences on larger questions related to urban design in the United States. Participants will begin with a brief introduction to the range of resources at ARB then have an opportunity to explore the highlighted collections in detail to examine the topics and questions presented by each and share ways in which these historical collections can guide the study of urban planning.
